THE BATTLE OF BLACK JACK FOREST.

The Enemy Chased by Our Cavalry-A Rebel Officer Killed-A Cavalry Fight by Moonlight-Rebels Routed, &c.

OUR ARMY CORRESPONDENCE. Pirisburg Landing, Tenn., March 21, 1862. This place—a contemptible, isolated little landing on the Tennessee river, about eight miles above Savannah the county seat of Hardin county-is destined to become

I came up with the advance floet. When we arrived there was no enemy within ten miles of this place. We have had no battles to record as yet; but a few tilts have occurred between our and the enemy's cavalry.

his battalion, reconnoitered westward, on the road to Purdy, and when about six miles out overhauled and chased a force of the enemy's cavalry, about one hundred strong, killing an officer by the name of W. R. Ro per, and wounding several others. Roper is believed to have been a native of South Carolina, and was in the rebel service at Pensacola, as shown by papers found upon his person. He was shot through the head, and died nstantly. In this little encounter the rebels fled with out firing a shot; consequently nobody was hurt on our emphis Railroad, in the vicinity of Juca, distant from nt some twenty-three miles, and thus cut off com munication between Memphis and the East. Our force consisted of three hundred and afty cavalry and a part of Major Bowman's battalion, eighty-six men, the whole or sajor nowman's obstation, eighty-air men, the whole under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Heath. The expedition was started at seven o'clock in the evening, and intended making the whole journey before daylight the next morning. It appeared that the enemy was at the same time organizing a night attack against our the same time organizing a night attack against our encampment and the transports, which were then discumbarking troops at this place, and, as the sequel shows, but for the most unexpected meeting of forces which ensued, there is no telling the injury we might have sustained; for our forces at the boats were in a disorganized state at the time, and were scattered about in a manner quite inviting to the enemy; and had the enemy, with his large force of cavalry, rushed in upon us in the night, the consequence might have been a disastrous stampede of our troops.

state at the time, and were scattered about in a manner quite inviting to the enemy; and had the enemy, with his large force or cavalry, rushed in upon us in the night, the consequence might have been a disastrous stampede of our troops.

The rebel forces, as learned from some prisoners taken, consisted of 500 cavalry. They rendezvoused at Poa Ridge, and advanced on 'ns over the Corinth road, the same road taken by our expedition, and when out about aix miles from here the heads of the columns met. It is evident, however, that the enemy had the first notice of the approach of the crisis; for they had halted, were prejared to receive us, and delivered the first fire. The collision occurred at Black Jack Forces, five miles this side of the Mississippi line. The first intimation our forces had that the enemy were upon us was from a fierce fire into our advance guard, which wounded the guide and several horses. The advance guard, however, stood firm and returned the fire immediately. Major Bowman instantly threw his command into line of battle, and advanced rapidly, the enemy falling back, firing as he went, while our forces returned the fire with the greatest promptitude. They fell back farther and farther into the forest, and finally seemed to make a stand; and when they discharged their double-barrelled shot guns, leaded with buckshot and balls, they revealed, by the giare of their fire, a long line-immediately in front, and not exceeding sixty yards from us. Their three was on every occasion returned with the carbines of our cavalry—that is, Bowman's portion of it—which threw their lines into confusion, and they retreated apparently in great disorder, making the wood fairly ring from the claiter of their sabres and trappings as shey plunged through the thickets, followed by a continuous dire from the carbines of our cavalry—the bards and fainter until they died entirely away.

The damage on our side was one guide and four soldiers wounded. Of course we could not tell what loss the name of their side and the sur who ran down into the sea, "being possessed of the devil."

There is something in the battle of Black Jack Forest esteulated to attract the attention of the reader. In the limit place, the meeting of the two forces was wholly accidental; in the second place it was at night—and who ever heard of a night action between two bodies of cavalry?—in the third place the enemy was on his own ground, having selected his own position to begin the light. Again, the action was a spirited one, earried on for half an hour in the woods, by the light of the moonand, finally, the enemy, five hundred strong, as confersed by themselves, were whipped and put to rent by less than one hundred of our troopers—the balance of our forcebeing out of sight and taking no part in the action. Major Bowman, the here of Black Jack Forest, is a New Yorker, a lawyer by profession, and recently practised in New York city.

Among other things found at the Gap was a gray cap with the letters S. M. ### NEWS FROM FORTRESS MONROE.

Activity of the Rebels at Pig Point and Crancy Island-Arrival of Gen. Hunter

Affairs remain quiet here, so far, at least, as to news that can with prudence be communicated to the public.

The weather is splendidly clear, with a gentle wind.

The rebels have been exceedingly busy about Pig Point and Craney Island for the last few days. Steam tugs have been busily plying to and fro, and it is supposed that the rebels are strengthening their fortifica-tions all along from Crancy Island to the Point.

They have also increased their forces in that vicinity, or for effect their camps have been advanced, and long lines of tents can be seen along the shore. The Merrimac continues to be the subject of much speculation as to the probability of her coming out

Glasses are directed almost momentarily towards Craney Island, and every indication of smoke or steam in that direction is closely investigated by hundreds of cager eyes. General Hunter and staff arrived here yesterday, or route to Port Royal, to take command of the army operations in that quarter. Our Fortress Monroe Correspondence. FORTRESS MONROE, March 27, 1862. Robel Camps on the James River-British Officers Visit the Monitor-A Flag of Truce-Capture of Drummer Boys by the Rebets, dec. The rebel camps on the west side of the James river ave multiplied to such an extent of Inte as to reach from Pig Point south to Crancy Island, and also a large camp north of Pig Point, on that side of the Nansemond steamer Rinaldo, still at this place, visited the battery Monitor. They were received very courteously by Lieutenant Jeffers and his subalterns. The visitors xamined the novel war machine very minutely, and manifested much surprise at its positive impregnability. Their record of the visit will probably be reduced to an

Their record of the visit will probably be reduced to an efficial communication for the instruction and edification of the British Admiralty Beard.

A flag of truce went to Sewall's Point to-day. It was met by a rebel steamer. No news of importance was brought on its return. I understand that the reason Col. Corcoran and his co-prisoners are not released is their knowledge of the present movements and designs of the rebels. This theory seems plansible.

Deniel Carlan, Anthony Eaton and Charles Donahue, drummer boys of the Thirty-eighth New York regiment, went outside of our pickets on the 25th inst., and were captured by a body of rebel cavalry.

Position of Affairs at Yorktown and Along the York River. The rober deserters who have recently come up here tell stories about the force and position of the rebels that do not hang well together. Their accounts of matters at Yorktown and along the York river do not correspond Yorktown and along the York river do not correspond with those that I have trom other sources. My information leads ine to believe that the affair of yesterday at Big Bethel, might have taken place at any time during the last three weeks, so far as any opposition on the part of the rebels was concerned. Big Bethel was evacuated by them a month age, and they have not been thore in force at any time since. The statement that they had 1,500 troops there yesterday is manifestly locorrect, and probably meant for 150, as the shay troops they have recently kept at Bethel have been picket guards and scouts. They are in strong force at Yorktown, where they have at feast 25,000 troops. Yorktown is very strongly fortified, both on the land and river side.

MARCH 25 .- Wm. Gibson vs. Solon W. Rice and P. C. Remington .- This was an action to recover $233 for one month's rent of a store in Gibson's Building, corner of Thirteenth street and Broadway. The rent was claimed under a lease made by the plaintiff to defendants. The defendants admitted the lease, but set up as a defence that they were restricted to use the premises for the sale of fluors and segars only, and that they were induced to take the lease in consequence of the representations of the plaintiff asgunt that they would secure the whole patronage of Wallack's theatre; that there was not in the premises and would not be any place for the sale of liquor and segars, and that Wallack was prohibited by his lease from having any bar attached to his theatre. These representations, the defendants alleged, were unirue, and that soon after they took peasession a bar was opened in Wallack's theatre which entirely destroyed their business. The defendants and some witnesses on their behalf were examined, and when the defendants reside, the Court, on plaintiff a motion, ordered judgment for the plaintiff. Messrs. #### THE NAVY.

The Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Since our last report of matters in the Navy Yard, Brooklyn, the United States steam sloopof ar Roanske has been floated into the dry dock, where she if undergoing the necessary al-terations for receiving her armor. A large number of men are employed on her, and, from the rapid advancement already made, it will not be very long before she will be floated again 18 to her native element. The Adirondack, having received her machinery, has been brought back to the yard, to have the damage she sus tained on Wednesday last repaired. The Massachusetts is mearly finished, and will go into commission the coming week.

Lieutenant G. H. Cooper, the executive officer of the yard, has been appointed to the command of the Massachusetts, and his place will be filled by Lieutenant T. Scott Fillebrown, an experienced officer of nearly twenty-one years' standing.

The Dawn has not received all her machinery yet, but is progressing rapidly, and the Savannah and John Adams are laying up at the dock, after being dismantied. The force of men to work on the Lackawanna and Ticonderoga has been dimithished, in consequence of the great hurry in fitting out the Roanoks, and they are therefore not advancing toward completion as rapidly as before; yet the amount of work done on them for the past week speaks well for the operatives. The number of men employed now is about 3,000, and everything about the yard denotes an abundance of employment for some time to come. There has not been any change in the marine barracks, the number of men there being about 200. They are all time, healthy looking men, and their morning dress parade forms a very enliveting scene.

The new steam gamboats, Fort Henry and Someraet, will go into commission to-morrow. The following is a jet of their officers:—

tons burthon, and has been completed under the supervi-sion of the naval constructor, William L. Hanscomb, in a superior manner. She carries three eleven-inch shell guns, on swivels—one amidships, one forward and one aft. She has besides six ports—three on each side— 32's, or Parrott 18's. The dimensions of the vessel are as follows.—Longth from end of cutwater to the taffrail (or extreme length), 258 feet; length between perpendiculars, 226 feet; depth from top of rail to bottom of keel (amid-ships), 25 feet; depth of hold from the midship line to ships), 25 feet; depth of hold from the midship line to gundeck, 16 feet 10 inches; width, beam extreme, 38 feet 5 inches; beam moulded, 37 feet 6 inches. She will draw about fourteen feet when fully loaded. Her masts are three in number—a square rigged foremast, with schooner rigged main and mizzen masts.

The schooner Samuel Rotan is also being repaired and repainted; she will be ready for sea about repaired and repainted; she will be ready for sea about the same time as the Rhode Island. The Wamsutta and Aroostook, which have been on the sectional docks of Messra. Simpson & Neal, are now ready for see, and will leave as soon as orders to that effect are forwarded from headquarters. They are lying in the stream opposite the yard. The Junian is still on the sectional docks of the yard, and after she has received her copper will be succeeded by the frigate Powhatan, which has been entirely dismantled. The Monongahela has made rapid progress with her planking, and it will be but a very short time before she will be ready for leaunching. There are now about one thousand seven hundred and fifty men engaged in the yard.

Trial Trip of the Steam Gunboat Marblehead. TO THE EDITOR OF THE HEBALD.

United States Stramer Marslengad, Old Point, March 22, 1862. Christening comes next in importance after the birth of a child, and I know of no better way of celebrating the advent of one of the best of the gunboats than in forming the HERALD that the Marblebead arrived here this afternoon, after a successful trip from Boston, in good order, and a well picked set of men for officers and erew, ready for any service the country may demand. The following is her list of officers:-

The following is her list of officers:—
Lieutenant Commanding—S. Nicholson.
First Lieutenant and Essecutive Officer—Goo. C. Remey.
Acting Mades:—George Martin, Bowen Allen.
Engineer—Clark Fisher.
Assistant Surgeon—B. H. Kidder.
Assistant Surgeon—B. H. Kidder.

Acting Masters' Matee—D. S. Gross, G. F. Winslow, T.
Laha, Jr., B. O. Low.

We left Boston on Tuesday morning, and should have arrived here on Thursday night but for a storm, which obliged us to go out of our course. Another gunboat, the Choours, started out at the same time, but was unable to keep along with us, making, as we were eight, nine and ten knots an hour. With one exception, the Mar-and tea knots an hour. With one exception, the Marbielead is to every respect superior to say of the other twenty-three gunboais. Her hull was bailt by G. W. Jackman, Jr., of Newburyport, Mass., and is a model of strength, and in workmanship and finish was universally admired while lying at the yard.

Her machinery was built by Stanton & Mailery, of Newburg, N. Y., and though their first work for the government, is probably nearer to the specification in weight, material and workmanship than, with one or two exceptions, any of the others built by larger and more generally known shows.

The engines are unusually heavy, but no well put together and accorately litted that they work with the most perfect cause and regularity. Being new, they have not, of course, been tried to the full extent of their power; but their excellent behavioer under this severe test of the rolling and pitching of the vessel during the storm, convinced overy one on board that they are everything that could be wished.

It is very unfortunate that in designing these boats they should have been made so extrem that in anything of a sea way they roll so badly as to make their guns practically useless, at the same time reducing their usertuless in smooth, shallow water, by giving them increased draught. There seems to be a growing mania for making vessels of war unreasonably acrow. The consequence is, they roil outrageously, rudning the risk of throwing their guns overboard, and placing them at a disadvantage in action with other standler vessels. Besides this they are the most uncomfortable ships in the world in anything but fine weather, and going to sea now a-days in a gunboat or sloop-of-war is about the same thing as the old fushioned publishment of being toshed in a blanket and ducked in the horsepond.

A French View of the Rebellion.

[From Galignani's Messenger, Paris, March 10, 1862. PARISTAN FASHIOMS FOR NEW YORK.

The recent cheering news from America, proclaiming victory for the Union troops, and forestandowing, almost beyond peradventure of speedy termination of the rebellion, has already produced speedy termination of the fashionable marks of industry in this made offects upon the fashionable marks of industry in this made offects upon the fashionable marks of industry in this made offects upon the fashionable marks of industry in this made of the experimental of the New World, in the more costly and recherche fabrics, has been severely felt. It was, therefore, with peculiary peasure that we halled the advent in our midst of an old, familiar face, in the person of Mr. W. B. Mackenzie, in past years an extensive purchaser of Matheaux and Mantchets de Paris for the New York city trade; and who has now the management of the celebrated United States Mantilla and Cloak Emperium of Mr. George Carey, 364 and 395 Canal street, in that city, Judging from the selections of this geneticm in the magazines of De Lille, Gazelin, Armandellie, Lecanu. Platel Berger and others of our distinguished madists, and which we were kindly permitted to haspeet previous to their shipment, the days of taste, and we would almost say extravagance, which have a long time characterized the ladies of America, have not yet entirely vanished, for never have we witnessed so truly elegant and charanting a collection of novelines as was there presented to our view. The world recowned heauties of the Kopublican Court at West West, as well as those of the Commercial Metroples. The world recowned heauties of the Kopublican Court at West West, as well as those of the Commercial Metroples as person to competitude themselves upon has Mr. Mackenzie, and we trust his visits to our gay capital will now be periodically continued.
